

Fokker 100

The Fokker 100 was announced by Fokker in 1983 as a replacement of the old Fokker F28. The main difference between the two aircraft was the longer fuselage, with a corresponding increase in seats would sit lower operational costs and the absence of competition in the 100-seat short-range class contributed to the success of this aircraft at the end of the eighties

Specifications:

- Cruising speed 845 km/h
- Range 2,700 km
- Seats 105
